Reducing Parental Conflict National Conference

Learning from enablers and challenges to support continued
progress

SESSION D
What does local evidence leadership look like?

INTRODUCTIONS & WELCOME

- Overview & context for the session: Ben Lewing, Foundations
- Local progress in evaluating RPC support: Nicola Wilder, Hertfordshire County Council
- Local application of the supporting families outcomes framework: Julie Neill & Esther Jones
- Breakout rooms
- Summary

- Consider local evidence leadership for RPC
- Reflect on a local example of RPC evaluation and the factors that support this
- Consider the local application of the supporting families outcome framework
- Through breakout rooms reflect on barriers and enablers to local RPC evidence leadership, consider how learning from others could be applied in your local context.

WHY FOCUS ON EVIDENCE LEADERSHIP

EVALUATE

7. OUTCOMES & EXPERIENCE

This element focuses on how progress in reducing the impact parental conflict on children is measured, and what the experience of support is like from the perspective of families. It includes using tools like an outcomes framework which is specific to reducing parental conflict, or integrating measures of conflict and its impact within wider child and family outcome frameworks.

EVALUATE

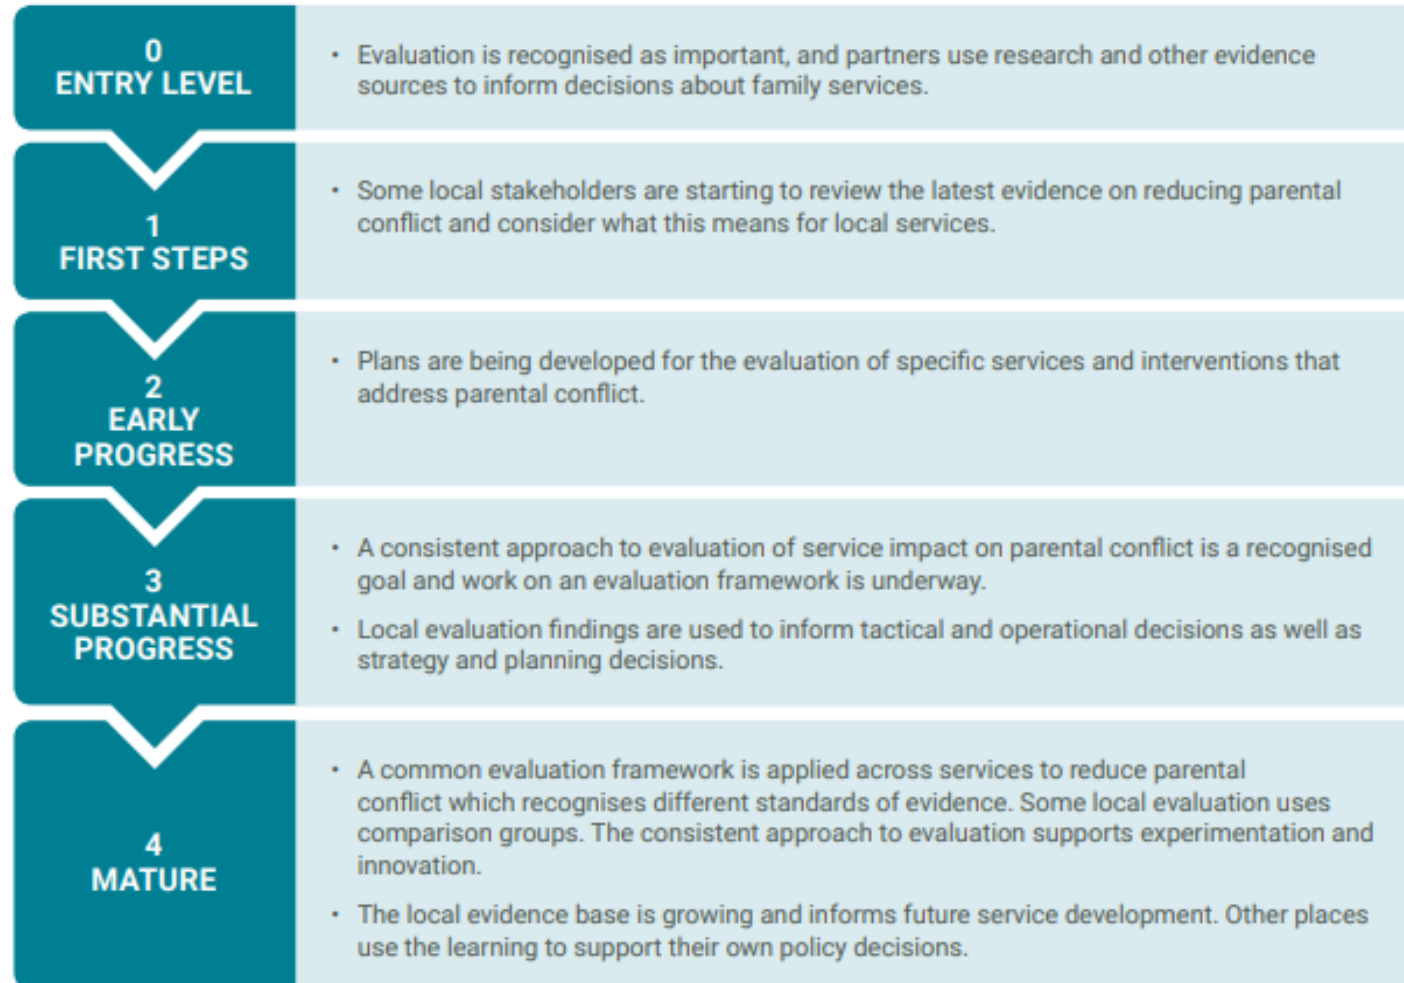

8. EVALUATION

This element focuses on how local partners find and apply external evidence on reducing parental conflict from research and practice, as well as generating robust local evidence where there is a need to innovate.

OUTCOMES & EXPERIENCE

EVALUATE: OUTCOMES & EXPERIENCE & EVALUATION

Enablers

- Use of existing frameworks such as the Supporting Families Outcomes Framework
- Use of validated measures and/or administrative data
- Use of a quality assurance framework
- Systems for recording and sharing data
- Development of a theory of change
- Embedding RPC evaluation into wider service evaluation

Challenges

- Difficult to access progress and outcome data
- Data protection processes
- Consistency of approaches and reliability of data
- Capacity and competing priorities

Next Steps

- Agreeing the information to collect
- Identifying validated measures and aligning with existing processes
- Developing data systems and processes

Evaluation Project September 23- February 24

A range of services are currently provided to support parents in conflict in Hertfordshire:

- Parenting When Separated
- One Plus One's Digital Intervention
- Workforce training
- Self-help webpage

In addition, relationship support for parents and carers of children and young people with special educational needs and disabilities has been implemented with additional funding received and courses will run from January until March 2024. Whilst the offer has been well received we do not have enough data at this stage to include it as part of the evaluation.

The focus of the project was to develop an evaluation plan in alignment with our RPC outcomes framework to assess the impact of the Parenting When Separated

Evaluation Project

September 23- February 24

What we did:

- 1) Clarifying aims and establishing an evaluation plan
- 2) Refining and clarifying measures
- 3) Delivery training

Evaluation Project Success and Challenges

- Having a structure and timeframe was helpful to keep the evaluation project on track. I found having governance for the project useful which has supported me to present findings at board improving precedence of the work being completed.
- Having an outside perspective is useful as being an RPC Co-ordinator can often feel like you are working in isolation. Having expertise from Anna Freud around outcome frameworks and evaluation tools was so helpful as there are so many this can often be overwhelming.
- Having a clear framework means we will be able to ensure that anything we put in place we have a clear understanding of the data we need to evidence outcomes.
- Understanding barriers to accessing support and improve access and engagement with marginalised groups, such as Fathers, minority ethnic groups and those affected by digital poverty through collaboration.
- Capacity and commitment to deliver can be an issue, as well as inconsistency in evaluation tools being completed.

Learning for other areas

- To have a clear outcome framework that can apply across all interventions
- To ensure that you have the right evaluation tools to measure impact
- To ensure that those delivering the interventions have a clear understanding of the outcome framework, the evaluation tools and the reason for collecting data to improve the quality and consistency of data being collected.
- To have opportunities to engage parents and carers in the development of your relationship support offer, ensuring that the offer is inclusive and accessible.
- To have high level buy in and a clear governance structure in place that ensure that the RPC remains a focus
- To have strong partnerships and there is accountability for delivery of support to families.

- Seconded from East Sussex
- 8 years involvement with Supporting Families
- Lead for RPC
- Other responsibilities included: parenting, workforce development, partnership working, young carers, worklessness, cost of living

Esther

- Regional Lead for East Midlands and North West
- Seconded from Leicester City
- 10 years involvement with Supporting Families
- Lead for RPC
- Other responsibilities: workforce development, Families affected by Imprisonment, worklessness, data transformation

Supporting Families is a service transformation programme

Building the resilience of vulnerable families

Supporting strong multi-agency partnerships

Developing mature data systems

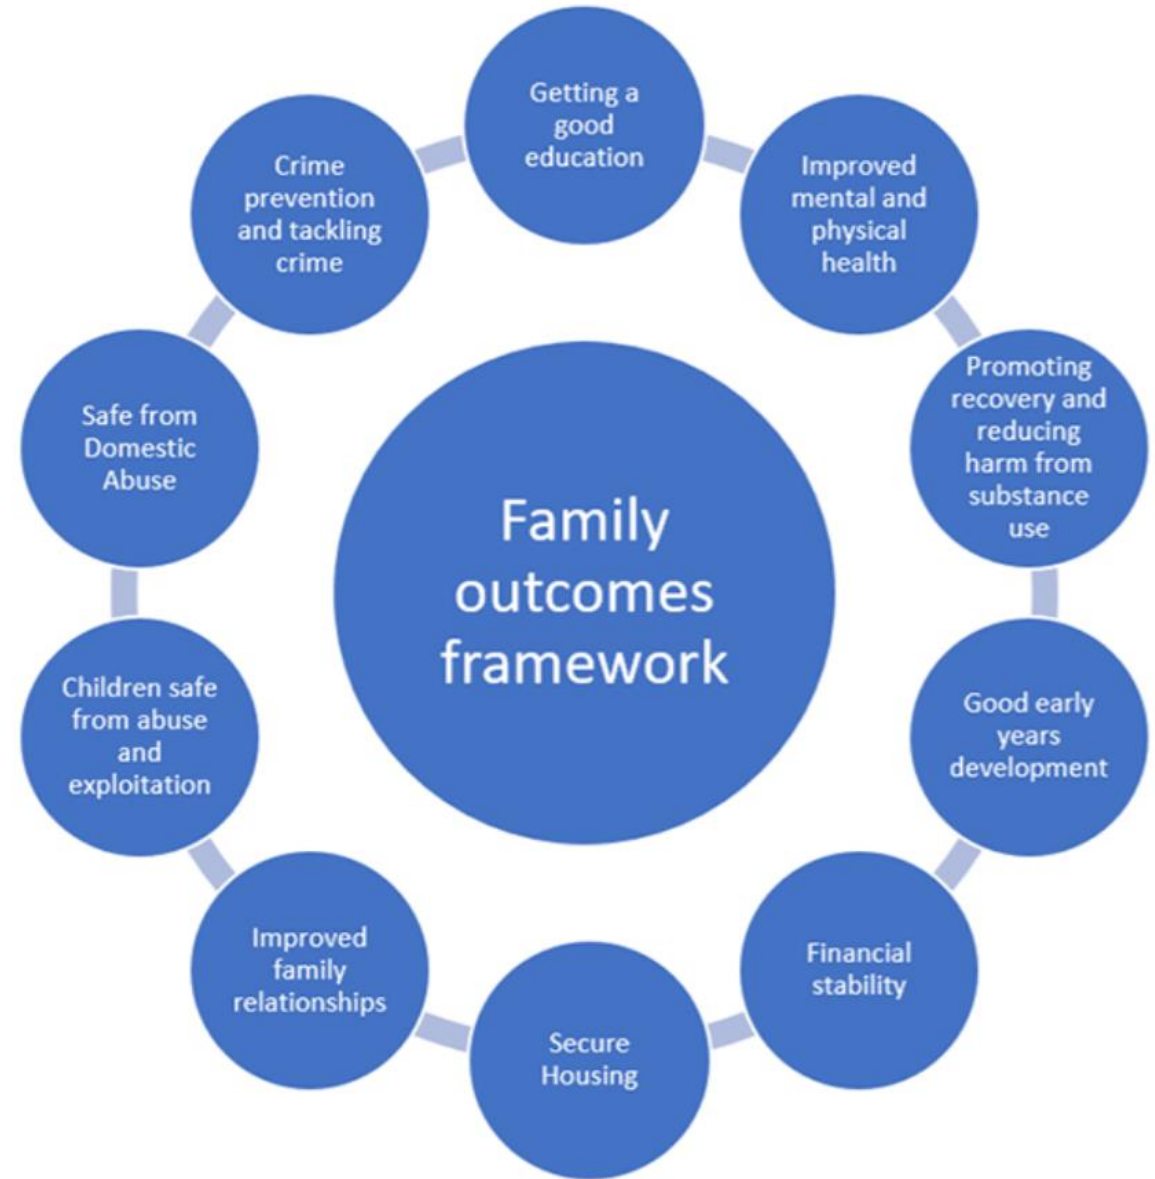

4 key principles

Early intervention

Whole family working

Multi-agency working

Measuring outcomes and data

Improved Family Relationships

1. Parent requires parenting support
- 2. Harmful levels of conflict

3. Child violent in the home
4. Caring circumstance changed requiring support

Family Need	Data Source	Outcome	Evidence
Harmful levels of parental conflict ie: when frequent, intense or poorly resolved	Police report Information from practitioner assessments, contacts and referrals, including self-referrals	No harmful parental conflict and improved family relationship Parents/carers understand impact of conflict on children	Validated outcome measure eg: family relationship quality tool Completed relationships support (evidence-based where possible) Evidence of parents/carers implementing strategies and improved outcomes Practitioner/self-assessed Improved outcomes

Idea One

Use the Supporting Families data to identify how many families have parental conflict as an identified need and how many achieved a positive outcome

You can:

- Use this for MI returns
- Use it to establish a baseline level of need
- Track it over time to monitor changes
- Use it as a light touch indicator of training impact

Idea Two

Interrogate the data to look at differences between workforce groups (services/ localities / partners)

You can:

- Use this to target training activity
- Use this to target supervision support
- Use this as a basis for discussion with service leads to garner engagement

Idea Three

Interrogate the data further to develop understanding of RPC need and impact in families

You can:

- Look at co-occurring family needs and identify trends
- Look at family demographics including locality, age, relationship status, ethnicity and identify trends
- Analyse trends to identify what's working well and where you can improve

What's available?

Can you access it?

Is RPC included?

Could it be added if not?

Build your circle of influence

Capitalise on relationships

Who do you know who can help?

Who knows the person who can help?

Don't be shy about a lack of skills and confidence

You wouldn't ask data staff to deliver family support!

Is there local training?

Can you arrange a teach-in with data colleagues?

Is there a Data Governance Board?
Could you use this to build relationships?
Could it help unblock barriers to data leadership?

What Boards exist and who attends?

What are their purposes and functions?

Are they receiving RPC data? Could they be?

Could they endorse recommendations to embed and sustain RPC?
